W. D. WALLACH

[From the Indiana State Sentinel.]

There is no fashion or folly adopted by our ton, or practiced by the leaders of society in its various grades, but is at once caught at and imitated by the African race. The great body of our people being agricultural, are slow to catch every innovation that fashion may prescribe, and the rage for a certain style, either in morals or dress, may sweep over the cities and die out before the masses of the people are infected by it. Not so with the colored gentry. In the free States they congregate in cities and watch closely the wave of fashion, riding always on its top, if it is possible to climb or swim or float so high. Imitative as they are, catching with facility the walk, dress, how and swirl of the same of their white brethren, it is not surprising that they should sometimes look beneath the surface of the society they love to spe, and strive to take a little swim in the undercurrent, too.

appearance. It is not to be wondered at that the reverend gentleman filling the eyes of all the gentle members of his charge should be an object of envy to all the aspiring young gents of his color, who would bite their lips with suppressed amotion as they saw him handing Miss Dinah across the street or leaning with Christian humility toward Miss Jemima, as they slowly paced the tow-path of the canal or leaned pensively over the railing of the bridge. Such is the fate of genius—to excite envy—and it may be, but we don't believe it is, that to the envy of the young gents of Pee-dee may be attributed the story we have heard of the Rev. Casar Augustus.

liquid softness mingled with the espreglers of her eye that held them fast in the chain that Cupid bound around them. Gay and light hearted, she was the life and soul of the social circle of Peedee. The Rev. Cessar Augustus, some months ago, expressed his fear that Miss Delevain would be lost and at the contract of the social circle of Peedee.

The hoops of Miss Delevain have lately been increasing in size, and sly remarks have been made by the envieus youngsters, who, in days gone by, had danced and chatted merrily with the now sedate and pious maiden. A few evenings ago a lively meeting was held. The Rev. Coesar and Miss D. walked to her lodgings together, and entered her room. Strange that people will be so inconsiderate—they forgot to draw the curtain—

"Hands in bands, and eye to eye, Low on the border of her couch they sat Stammering and staring."

We drag the curtain over the scene, exercising in this respect a little more prudence than the loving couple did. The Rev. Mrs. Coesar Augustus was among the witnesses at the window, and what the effect on the church may be of this indiscretion is yet to be developed.

A WHITE KALLOCH.

A WHITE KALLOCH.

It is rumored on our streets that a clergyman in Madison, of high standing, has been guilty of an indiscretion, we taink they call it now, with a servant girl living in his family.

As the Rev. Mr. Sheets, of that city, has recently been expelled for refusing to marry the mother of his child, it is but fair to state that we do not allude to him. Is Mormonism about merning after his arrival in Boston, when leaving his bed to dress for breakfast he saw reflected in a mirror the corpes of a weman, lying in the bed from which he had just risen. Spell-bound, he gazed with intense feeling and tried to recognize the Latures of the corpe, het was; he could not even more his eyelids; he feel deprived of action, for how long he knew not. He was at last startled by the ringing of the bell for breakfast, and sprang to the bed to satisfy himself if what he had seen reflected in the mirror was real or an illusion. He found the hed so he had left it, he looked again into the mirror, but only saw the bed truly reflected. During the day he thought much upon the illusion, and determined next morning to rub his eyes and feel perfectly sure that he was wide awake before he left bed. But notwithstanding these precantions, the vision was repeated with this addition, that he thought he recognised in the corpe some resemblance to the features of his wife.

In the course of the second day he received a letter from his wife, in which she stated that she was quite well, and hoped he was enjoying himself among his friends. As he was devotedly attached to her, and always anxious for her safety, he supposed that his morbid fears had conjured up the vision he had seen reflected in the glass, and went about his business as cheerfully as asual. On the morning of the third day, after he had dressed, he found himself in thought in his own house, leaning over the softin of his wife. His friends were assembled, the minister was performing the funeral services, his children wept—he was in the house of death. He followed the corpse to the grave; he heave the earth rumble upon the coffin, he saw the grave filled, and the green sods covered over it; yet, by some strange power, he could see through the ground the entire form of his wife as she lay in her coffin. He looked into the faces of those around him, but no one seemed to notice him; he tried to should break, when he was recalled to con-micusness by a friend, who entered the room to inform him that his breakfast was ready. He started as if awoke from a profound sleep, though he was standing before the mirror with a hair-brush in his hand.

After composing himself, he related to his friend what he had seen, and both concluded that a good breakfast only was wanting to dis-sipate his unpleasant impressions. A few days afterwards, however, he received the melan-chely intelligence that his wife had died sudcholy intelligence that his wife had died suddenly, and the time corresponded with the day he had been startled by the first vision in the mirror. When he returned home he described minutely all the details of the funeral he had seen in his vision, and they corresponded with the facts. This is probably one of the most vivid instances of clairvoyance on record. Mr.
M'Donald knows nothing of modern spiritualism or clairvoyance, as most of his life has been passed upon a farm and among forests.
It may not be amiss to state that his father, who was a Scotch Highlander, had the gift of "second sight."—Boston Traveller, Oct. 10.

Some mes are boastful of their ancestry, while others are entirely devoid of all pride of birth, and have no more respect for the genealogical table of their forefathers than they have for Poor Richard's Almanac. The late John Randulph of Roanoke used to assert his belief that he was descended from the celebrated Indian Princess, Pocahontas, but it is not known that he ever established his claim to that disrinction.

belief that he was descended from the colebrated Indian Primeess, Pocahontas, but it is not known that he ever established his claim to that distinction.

Many years ago there lived in a near State a young gentleman who took it into his head that, like John Randolph, he was of Indian descent, though, unlike John, he did not know exactly the tribs to which his forefathers belonged. The idea was a perfect monomonia with him, notwithstanding the efforts of his friends to convince him of the folly of his pretensions, to say nothing of the absurdity of them, even if they could be established. The favorite notion, however, could not be eradicated from his mind, and he promised his friends that he would one day convince them that he was right in his claims.

Having heard that a deputation of Indians were at Washington, on a visit to their great father, the President, he promptly repaired to this city, and arranging with the gentleman who had them in charge, his friends in the city were surprised to receive an invitation to accompany him on a visit to the Red Mon, before whom he proposed to verify his favorite pretensions. The party met as requested, and tound the Indians sitting on the floor smoking their pipes, and manifesting but little appreciation of the honor of the visit.

Having arranged his friends at a respectful distance from the aged chief, who still regarded the visitors with a cid it & ference, the young man stepped boldly from the centre, and presuming that it would require some show of energy to arouse the chiefs from their apparent apathy, he placed his hand on his breast, and said with great fearlessness:

"Me—Indian—long time ago."

The chief, who was not skilled in talking Esglish, took his pipe from his mouth, but evin ad no emotion whatever. The speaker then thinking that a more violent gesture and a louder tone would be necessary, struck his hand upon his breast with much force, and said in a loader tone:

"Yes—me—Indian—long time ago!"

Tin Warmer, famous throughout America as the most perfect Stove ever made, can also be had at our establishment.

In fact we have the exclusive agency of the Stoves enumerated.

Our assortment of Perfect Complete, Penior Complete, Royal Cooks, Baltimere Complete, &c., &c., is large and carefully selected.

SPECIAL.—We now call particular attention to our "Gas-Burning Parlor Heater," declared by judges to be far superior to any thing ever produced. As evidence of the fact, we have already this season put up upwards of thirty, and this is the first time we have ever called the public attention to their excelling merits.

On the shortest notice we are also prepared to furnish and erect Hayward's or Kisyer-Book's Furnaces. The single mention of these cannot but
